International Wolf Center

2013 OVERVIEW

CELEBRATING A YEAR OF SUCCESSES

This year wolf biologists came from around the world to headline presentations at the International Wolf Center's 2013 symposium. "Wolves and Humans at the Crossroads" brought more than 500 participants to the landmark event in Duluth, Minnesota, in October. At the Interpretive Center in Ely, Minnesota, pups Luna and Boltz celebrated healthy one-year birthdays, and visitors learned about wildlands at the "Legacy of Sigurd Olson" exhibit in partnership with the Listening Point Foundation and enjoyed artist Shaun Chosa's "Wolves, Humans and Ravens." Classroom students made virtual visits to the Center via WolfLink videoconferences, which won two awards for excellence. Our four-star rating with Charity Navigator was reflected in record-breaking contributions on Give to the Max Day and the addition of 400 new members. The Center joined with schools in Mexico and Canada to teach students about wolves and sponsored the annual Midwest Wolf Stewards meeting in partnership with agencies and organizations in Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota. In partnership with our members and donors we want to continue a healthy dialogue on a remarkable charismatic and controversial species. Thank you for always sparking our creative work to "teach the world about wolves."

Self-Published Book Supports Center's Mission

Wild Wolves We Have Known tells the stories of individual wolves through the lenses of those who know them best—the biologists who have studied them. Immerse yourself in the fieldwork; observe the challenges facing the species, and bear witness to the extraordinary resilience of these remarkable wolves. Book sales which support the Center's mission have been brisk.

If you've never encountered a wolf in the wild, read this book. Once you meet these wolves, you will never forget them. And, perhaps, you'll come to understand why we must find room for the wolves to continue their story."

—Don Shelby, retired CBS news anchor

INTERNATIONAL
WOLF SYMPOSIUM

Wolves and Humans at the Crossroads

100 + Presentations by Experts From 18 Countries

Highlights of the 2013 Symposium included 500 participants, nearly double the attendance of the previous symposium, an awards banquet, a public screening of the film by Emmy award-winning Bob Landis titled The Life of Wolf '06, spirited debates on wolf recovery, reintroduction, and recovery and a highly engaging consensus-building session following a panel discussion on wolf hunting.

"The issues are many: recovery plans, successes and failures, delisting, hunting and trapping, genetic research, human tolerance and the very understanding of what wolf recovery means and does not mean. Controversies on these topics may well unite us or send us onto separate paths. Our collective work will make all the difference."

2013 HIGHLIGHTS

EDUCATION / OUTREACH

- Sponsorship of the annual Midwest Wolf Stewards meeting held in Michigan.
- Presented Wolves, Humans and Ravens in Culture and Mythology, an original art exhibit by Ely, Minnesota artist, Shaun Chosa. This exhibit featured paintings representing Chosa's cultural relationship to wolves both as an American Indian and Norwegian American as well as those cultural connections to myths and creation stories from both ethnicities.
- Received the Pinnacle Award from the Center for Interactive Learning Collaboration and the Recommended Videoconference Award from Berrien RESA in 2013 for the Center's WolfLink videoconferencing program.
- In 2013, we offered several new displays in the children's exhibit that clarified the connection that humans have with wolves, such as recycling and composting, water quality, habitat types and changes and recreational use of the environment.
- The students from our participating Wolves Without Borders in Canada presented a program at the Wolf Stewards Conference in Thompson, Manitoba, Canada. They shared highlights about the program and described what their experience was like. The students did a great job and got to meet with Rob!
- Presented the Legacy of Sigurd Olson exhibit in coordination with the Listening Point Foundation. This exhibit showcased the life and legacy of wolf researcher and environmentalist Sigurd Olson, who played a major part in providing scientific evidence that wolves play an important role in the environment.

2013 HIGHLIGHTS

WOLF CARE

The Wolf Care team spent most of 2013 adjusting to the needs of a growing Exhibit Pack. In March 2013 the pups became yearlings, a milestone that equates to teenage years in human terms. As yearlings, their skeletal growth nears completion, providing a much clearer idea of how Luna in particular would function as an adult. X-rays in mid-summer revealed Luna's bone density had improved and her plate in her leg had calcified, causing our veterinarians to advise against removal of the plate on the femur. However, blood work showed she continued to have vitamin D deficiencies. Staff spent a significant amount of time determining special diets, supplements and management protocols to ensure that Luna remains healthy and active.

Wolves are often referred to as social carnivores. Within that social structure, wolves behave according to their gender-specific rank order. Luna is the only female, so her rank is inherently dominant. Boltz is joining a pair of strong males, including Aidan as the dominant male and Denali as the subordinate brother to Aidan. Yearlings try to test for status and rank order, and Boltz was no exception. But after a few short-lived attempts, Aidan proved to be a strong, confident pack leader that has earned the respect of his newest male packmate, Boltz.

The other Wolf Care focus was on Shadow, Malik and Grizzer, the retired wolves who are reaching milestones as well. Shadow and Malik turned 13 years of age on May 8, 2013, and Grizzer was 9 years of age on May 5, 2013.

2013 HIGHLIGHTS

MEMBERSHIP / DEVELOPMENT

- Achieved a four-star rating with Charity Navigator—the highest rating possible!
- Raised $72,642 via Give to the Max Day 2013, our most successful ever—40 percent more in donations over 2012, exceeding our board match of $31,000. Donors to the Center during this one-day online fundraising event represented not only Minnesota but 40 U.S. states and 14 countries.
- Raised $62,000 to support the 2013 International Wolf Symposium, securing major grants from new and returning donors, including the Arthur L. and Elaine V. Johnson Foundation, the Turner Endangered Species Fund, the Harold W. Sweatt Foundation, and 15 additional individual and organizational donors.
- Increased membership by nearly 400 new members through a special Summer 2013 campaign effort at our Interpretive Center in Ely, Minnesota.
- Successfully migrated to a more secure, new management software and database system for membership/development records and online giving.
- Held a number of member and donor events, including a banquet at the 2013 International Wolf Symposium, a new WolfTrek bus trip, and a private birthday party to support the International Wolf Center.
